PALMIST'S STORY OF KING EDWARD'S RIGHT HAND.

Unique Analysis Shows, According to Sir Henry Prichard, That the Boer War Will Terminate in the Spring of 1903 Through the Sending of a Special Commissioner to South Africa.

KING EDWARD VII.

This magnetism highly developed, he has others at his mercy, and finds it not at all difficult to carry out, with the assistance of the King's intuition, which gives him a very keen insight into characters of others, and enables him to see the future of his subjects, from placing too much confidence in his associates, etc. The mount of Mars is very weak, and shows up less prominent than any other mounts and shows that he is a man of peace rather than war. The mount of the Moon indicates nervous trouble, when considered with other developments of the hand and points strongly to the death of the King by cancer in the year of 1903.

Life Line Shows Health.

"The life line shows good health, with great vitality, the line being double most of the way, but it indicates a loss of forces prior to middle life; otherwise it shows a life free from accident and sickness, living to be quite old and dying, as before stated, by cancer. The line of fate, marked deeply, shows a happy and prosperous life. The nation will continue to prosper under his reign, peace and harmony will again be established within her borders. The Boer war will terminate in the spring of 1903, through the sending of a special commissioner to South Africa, just as Lord Dufferin was sent to Canada, with full power to negotiate, after carefully looking at matters as they are seen from the standpoint of one who is familiar with the conditions as they really exist."

Pence Will Prevail.

"The line of fortune shows success, both in earthly and in celestial enterprises, during the whole life, but it is much more marked during the latter part. The King seemed very much interested in regard to the relations existing between England and other countries. I found from indications on the hand that relations were friendly and would continue so through the whole of the reign of King Edward. After the close of the Boer war, peace will reign throughout the whole of the United Kingdom, and that success in a very marked degree would come to the mother country and the whole of her colonies during the next ten years. More especially will be true of Australia and New Zealand."

Harness Hurricanes.

In Southern California an ingenious inventor has constructed a huge combination of lenses and reflectors whereby the heat of the sun is made to run machinery, pump water and do other hard labor. In various parts of the world inventors have built machines to utilize the wave motions of the ocean. The next thing you will be saying is that if that is so, why not use the heat of the sun to make steam power? I am telling you that that very thing had already been done. At least, so an inventor claims. According to his patent, his machine is far superior to any other means of using natural forces. The secret of the construction of his contrivance is carefully guarded, but, as soon as the patents are thoroughly established, he promises to give a public exhibition with the first steam breeze that comes along. One of the most remarkable claims of the inventor is that his apparatus is applicable to locomotives, and that it will displace electricity and compressed air in propelling street cars. All sorts of locomotion or navigation are possible, says Professor Higgs, and he promises to make steam power a thing of the past.

Accommodating Janitor.

Mr. Pinnerich (inspecting fat): "You are there is plenty of steam heat. How about the hot water?"

Real Estate agent: "Hot water? Oh, er, the janitor will keep you in that."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Snow.

Like fairy mist, without a sound,
The white seclusion wraps us 'round
In isolation sweet, profound.

The old, familiar landmarks pass
As faces from a looking-glass;
As dew the sun lifts off the grass;

And childhood memories awake,
A dream for every starry flake,
And hopes no stress of frost may break.

The world fades out; how trivial show
Its empty joys, its hollow woe,
Beside this vision of the snow!

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
San Francisco, Feb. 8.—Sir Henry Prichard of this city, founder of the famous London School of Palmistry, is one of the few palmists who have read the hand of King Edward VII. of England.

During the summer of 1900 he was invited by King Edward to Marlborough House. The King received him without formalities, stating that he had long been a believer and also a careful student of palmistry, and considered it a wonderful science, and often wondered what the meaning of certain lines were, and what the future had in store for him, as indicated by the lines in his palms.

"I made a careful analysis of the King's palm," said Sir Henry the other day, "and I found them quite remarkable."

"His right hand is of the square or useful type, and partakes somewhat of some of the characteristics found in the mixed type. It is the hand of a man well able to fill the position as ruler over one of the greatest nations in the world. Shows him to be a man of good judgment, a good law-maker, with ability to organize and arrange great undertakings, with power to control and direct others while carrying out the same. At times he will be governed more by his sympathies than by his judgment."

Mount of Venus.

"The Mount of Venus is strongly developed, showing affection, love of home and children, and a very liberal and generous nature. It also indicates a strong, which indicates good judgment when properly used. Owing to the fact that the palm of the hand is much longer than the finger, this shows that he will not be at all times a lover of his kind, but will be influenced by his own feelings."

"The parallel lines on the mount of Venus show him to be very liberal and very broad-minded, with an intense desire to do good at all times with his people; this alone, at all times, will cause him to be guided by public sentiment. This is clear from the first phalange of the hand, and shows that he is a man of power, for he seems to have complete control over the whole, it indicates a great deal of determination and self-respect, but without selfishness. The hand is very strong, but never compelled to do anything that he feels that he ought not to do. The mount of Venus is well developed, and shows a great love of justice, in the highest sense of the word; also a love for law and order in everything, who has a love for peace rather than war; shows courage to stand for the right and force enough to fight to the bitter end, when convinced of the righteousness of the cause."

Great Reverence Indicated.

"It shows liberality of mind along religious lines, with great reverence for God, without being bound by forms and ceremonies, permeating the whole of his life. According to the dictates of their own conscience, the development of the mount of Saturn shows a love for outdoor sports and studies, a love for the study of the formation of the fourth finger in connection with the mount of Mercury shows great intuition and a desire for pleasure, along lines such as you find in signs of chance, principally in this case a desire to be continually in the presence of the world, for the gain, but for the pleasure to be derived therefrom. Were it not for this love of sport, the King, owing to the development of the mount of Saturn, would be subject at times to fits of despondency, and would at times show a great deal more than he should, and in that way would bring on ill health. The mount of the Sun, being somewhat prominent, indicates a great appreciation for music, but no talent to any marked degree. This mount also indicates and shows that he is a lover of nature's beauties, art, literature and poetry."

King's Strange Power.

"The King's whole bearing is very strange, and he seems to possess some strange power, for he seems to have complete control over others, his personal magnetism is very strong, and when one grasps his hand one feels some vibration. This alone tells him the secret of success. With his ability to plan, promote and organize, with

DISCOVERED ANCIENT RUINS ANTEDATING THE INCAS.

Cities and Tombs of a People Who Long Had Passed Away When Manco Capac Established Famous Line of Peruvian Monarchs Found in the Andes Mountains by Doctor Max Uhle.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Berkeley, Cal., Feb. 8.—It has fallen to the lot of Doctor Max Uhle, the University of California's specialist, engaged in exploring the ancient ruins of Peru, to visit cities and palaces never before seen by the eyes of a white man, and to gather the relics of an American civilization stretching back further than Roman times. In the high tablelands of Central Peru Doctor Uhle has stumbled across cities and tombs of a people who had long passed away when Manco Capac established the famous line of the Incas. He went to Peru to study the remains of the Incas whom Pizarro overthrew, but he has gone further than his first intentions and has found that the Peruvian highlands have been inhabited by others of no less interest than the glittering monarchs who welcomed the first Spaniards. Doctor Uhle hopes, on his return to Peru, to go still farther into the dim past and finally to uncover the sources of the first American civilization.

Palaces and Fortifications.
On the hill of Marca-Huamachuco, on the Eastern Cordillera of the Andes, Doctor Uhle discovered the palaces and fortifications of a people who flourished and declined and were conquered by the Incas. The northeastern part of the hill, which is almost 12,000 feet high, is called by the Indians "El Castillo," because it was formerly surrounded all the way by a chain of fortifications and was crowned by a strong building on the summit. All the other eminences of the ridge were covered with buildings, courts and palaces. Some of the buildings were square-cornered, others were rounded at the corners, a type characteristic of this Province of Peru.

They were built of broken stone, taken from the native rock of the mountain, and joined with admirable skill. Long slabs formed the casings of the doors and win-down, and similar slabs were used to strengthen the corners of the buildings. City walls were used as mortar. Some of the high walls are now remarkably well preserved. Many of the buildings are round or irregular in shape, sometimes representing a whole fortress. Many such buildings once stood within the summit fortress of El Castillo. All the inclosures are surrounded by double walls joined like a gallery, and containing several floors, reached by ladders and opening into the inner court. Small square buildings stood within.

Tombs Above Ground.
D. Uhle found that the inhabitants were often in the habit of interring the dead in the walls of the dwelling houses. These tombs were usually found by opening the walls three or four feet above the ground. Sometimes they contained the bones of as many as eight people. Other tombs were discovered at the foot of shelving rocks and in round or square burial places on the plain. Beyond human remains little was found in them. On the Cerro Amaru Doctor Uhle found a sculptured stone, showing plainly that it was meant to represent the head of a wild beast, with feet and tusks, eyes and nose. He also discovered three or four others like it which once existed there, were the guards of these ceremonial wells into which offerings were thrown. One of these wells was drained and yielded a large quantity of beads and ornaments. The head, Doctor Uhle believes, is centuries older than the Incas.

At Tambo Colorado, near Pisco, in Central Peru, Doctor Uhle found a remarkably well-preserved palace of the Incas. He has visited and explored many other cities and palaces, some of the Incas and others of older races. He has gathered up a vast quantity of objects, which will go into the museums of the University of California.

Chronic Ulcers Eating Sores

That Breed and Foster the Germs of Cancer. Plague Spots the Outgrowth of Diseased Blood, and a Constant Drain upon the System.

An old sore or ulcer is not only a source of great bodily discomfort and pain, but the constant care, worry and anxiety over one of these malignant festering places produce an unhealthy state of the nervous system and the patient becomes morbidly sensitive, miserable and gloomy. No one could be otherwise when haunted by the presence of an inflamed, angry-looking sore, with a continual discharge, carrying with it the life fluids, thus robbing the body of strength and vitality. An eating, lingering ulcer naturally fills the sufferer with fear while noting the daily growth of the sore, from which there is a slow but perpetual discharge of yellow or greenish watery matter, and feeling the dull, throbbing or sharp shooting pains as the poison penetrates the tender tissues and reaches the bone.

All slow-healing, stubborn sores are dangerous. The same germ-producing cancer-tainted blood is back of every sore or ulcer, large or small, that does not promptly and permanently heal. The little blister upon the lip or tongue, the warty growth or mole upon the cheek and other parts of the body, and the almost imperceptible tumor or lump upon the breast, as often result in Cancer as the deeper and more frightful-looking ulcers. They feed upon the same morbid and destructive materials that are generated within the blood, and inflammation and destruction of tissue will continue just so long as this impure matter is carried through the circulation to these old sores and ulcers. Washes, salves, nor anything else applied directly to the sore can do any permanent good; neither does the use of the knife or flesh destroying plaster cure, for local causes have nothing to do with these germ-breeding plague spots. You might cut out every particle of the diseased flesh and scrape the bone, but another sore would come. The germs or poison in the blood must be destroyed, the stream of sluggish, polluted blood purified and made strong before the healing process begins and the sore or ulcer can get well. S. S. S. is the only remedy known that can and does accomplish this. It cleanses and purifies the circulation, and when new, rich blood is carried through the little veins and arteries to the sore, it brings about a healthy healing around the edges, and a permanent and thorough cure is soon effected. S. S. S. not only expels all impurities, but works a complete and radical change in the entire system by stimulating inactive organs, toning up the nerves, increasing the appetite, and aiding digestion and assimilation of food, thus building up the weak and wasted constitution. S. S. S. is strictly and entirely a vegetable medicine, and no bad effects follow its use, and for this reason it is better than Mercury and Potash or other minerals, which not only ruin the stomach, but often produce most stubborn and offensive sores themselves.

Prompt treatment should be given a sore or ulcer, no matter how small it may be, whether external or internal, for what you think a simple sore, may, in reality, be an undeveloped Cancer. Our physicians will gladly advise all who need their services, and those who write us will receive valuable suggestions regarding the treatment of their case free of charge.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
New York, Feb. 8.—Estelle B. Winslow will have a chance to show what she can do with the finest appointed boarding-house at No. 415 Madison Avenue, which her partner, Kate Dignan, has been running for a loss.

The two women formed a co-partnership last November, in which Mrs. (Miss) Winslow furnished the money and Kate Dignan the experience and they were soon in difficulties and Estelle Winslow sued for a dissolution of the partnership.

Judge Leventritt yesterday appointed Estelle Winslow a receiver for the business.

Incidentally, there is in the proceedings a revelation of the mysteries of boarding-house finance that cannot fail to be of interest to those who have faced the cold, pained face of landlady on asking for another dollar, or a second helping of eggs at the morning repast.

If Kate Dignan had served hash often but that is incompetent, and has not been gone into in detail.

Leased the Premises.

According to Estelle B. Winslow, who leased the premises for $2,800 a year, furnished—that is, the house was furnished. She says she spent the money necessary for running the house, while Kate Dignan frittered away her time hiring and discharging servants.

There is a world of pathos in the statement made to Judge Leventritt by the suing partner that Kate Dignan, in three months, engaged twenty-three servants and discharged nineteen of them. As the establishment is not as large as is estimated, it may be imagined what a campaign with the intelligence offices that represents.

Kate Dignan acted as housekeeper, and according to Estelle Winslow, contributed nothing to the expense of the establishment.

An example of her management, Estelle Winslow cites, the accounts for November and December last, when, as she says, the house was constantly kept and housekeeping generally were $1,053, while the boarders paid in that time, only $407, so that those two months involved a loss of $746.

Under these conditions, Estelle Winslow insists that Kate Dignan has demonstrated her incapacity to housekeep the enterprise.

Mrs. Dignan's Story.

There is another side of the case, of course. Kate Dignan wrote a letter to the Judge asking that a disinterested party be made receiver, and conveying the intelligence that she was not to be disturbed. Again, it is necessary to read between the cold lines of typewritten matter and picture the strife to keep the place ultra exclusive. Why were the candidates for board refused?

The only reason that suggests itself is that they were not of the grade at which Estelle B. Winslow was determined to keep her pension. Perhaps there was a sort of civil examination of boarders, applicants at the door, and only those were passed who discriminated between the implements for the consumption of salad and those meant for the manipulation of meats, with side questions as to finger-bowls and services. At all events, the happy home is divided. Estelle B. has been made receiver because she is the status quo before the partition, and the furniture, which is said to be worth $2,000 and Kate Dignan's reign is over.

POSTAL EMPLOYEES BANQUET.
Postmaster Baumhoff Entertains His Chiefs of Departments.

Postmaster F. W. Baumhoff entertained the heads of departments of the St. Louis post office with a dinner at the Mercantile Club last night. The early part of the evening was devoted to social intercourse, after which there was a general discussion of the work accomplished in the various departments during the past year, and plans were presented for improving the service in the future.

Those present were W. F. Saunders, former Assistant Postmaster; William Sacks, superintendent of the Information Bureau; F. A. Rehm, superintendent of carriers; W. H. Lamb, superintendent of mails; C. D. Comfort, auditor of stations; F. B. Runder, cashier; George Stroup, former chief of registered mail department; A. J. Michener, president of Letter Carriers Union; P. C. Linchey, money order department; R. J. O'Connell, postal card department; John H. Harlow, cashier; J. H. Brocken, secretary; and A. L. Sigmond, city delivery department.

Banner Buggy Company Employees Give Dinner.

The employees of the Banner Buggy Company gave an informal dinner, followed by several clever vaudeville turns, at the Linden Hotel last night. The purpose of the entertainment was to promote good feeling and sociability.

As the evening progressed such joviality prevailed that the board committee of the Municipal Ownership party, which was meeting in an adjoining room, was attracted by the sounds of mirth, and several of the members looked in on the party through a window in the door. This was the cue for the hostess to invite the party to the entire meeting in to participate in the festivities. The invitation was accepted.
